

Mission

Diplomacy and the military have always played a pivotal role in significant political, social, and economic development around the world. To be an effective leader of the future, it is therefore important to have a solid understanding of how diplomacy and the military impact politics and society. Hawai'i Pacific University's (HPU) Master of Arts in Diplomacy and Military Studies (MA/DMS) provides you with an interdisciplinary view of the role of diplomacy and military force in world affairs from both a historical and contemporary perspective. To acquaint you with different methodologies and approaches to understanding statecraft and the military, the program combines courses in history, art history, humanities, literature, philosophy, anthropology, political science, international relations, and strategic security.
